GESB HOSTS FREE RETIREMENT PLANNING SEMINAR IN CBD

GESB, which manages $10 billion in funds under management<sup>1</sup> on behalf of 313,000 Western Australians, is hosting a free retirement planning seminar in the Perth CBD on Tuesday 23 February.

The seminar will help people understand the current economic environment and its affect on super, how much money they may need in later life and how to make use of a transition to retirement strategy.

Fabian Ross, Head of Wealth Management at GESB, said, “Our research shows that one third (35%) of Australians expect to continue working past 60, as they will not be financially prepared to retire.

“It’s crucial that people understand the income they’re likely to need in later life - singles need around $38,000 and couples around $51,000 each year to retire comfortably,” said Mr Ross<sup>2</sup>.

“While it may not be the sole source of income in retirement, super is the best long-term investment vehicle for later life, and there are a number of different strategies that can be used to maximise savings, depending on personal circumstances.

“The seminar will help people to think about the options open to them as they begin to think about retiring, like strategies to boost super or reduce working hours from 55 years of age onwards.”
